Culture.

New York Sun.

Culture, dear boy, has come to be a cant term, and no end of nonsense and platitude has been written and talked about it is since the day when Emerson made it the theme of a Boston discussion. What you mean is cultivation. You want to know what is necessary to make you acultivated man. Everything within the range of knowledge of thought and of laste is necessary. All good books will help you to the end, and some which are not good may assist you in the way of comparison. Association with cultivated people and conversation with them are indispensable aids. The taste to discriminate the good from the bad in all art is essential. Social refinement is requisite.

But nobody can know it all. You can only learn a very little, but what you learn learn thoroughly. Be careful to read the books of the masters of the literary art, so that you will be insensibly affected by their style until you come at less to discrete the man appears to be, "Remember 134c bid; September 134c October 15c; May you come at less to discrete man appears to be, "Remember 134c bid; September 134c October 15c; May you come at less to discrete man appears to be, "Remember 134c bid; September 134c October 15c; May you come at less to discrete man appears to be, "Remember 134c bid; September 134c October 15c; October 15c; October 15c; May you come at less to discrete man appears to be, "Remember 134c bid; September 134c October 15c; May you come at less to discrete man appears to be, "Remember 134c bid; September 134c October 15c; October
